

Co-designing with our communities

What is meant by co-design?

“Co-design” refers to a participatory approach to designing solutions, in which community members are treated as equal collaborators in the design process. Co-design is a well-established approach to creative practice, particularly within the public sector.

What are the benefits of co designing?

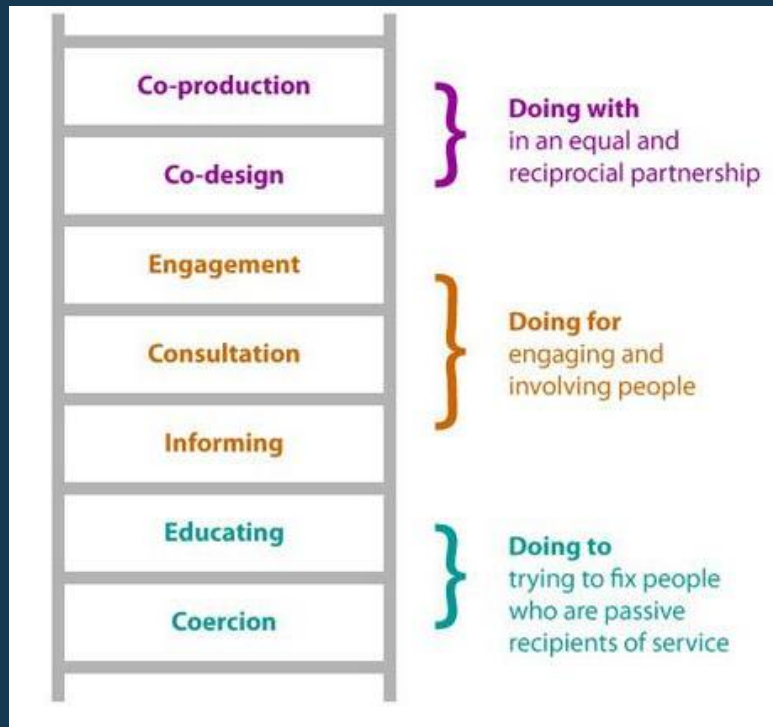

The wide range of benefits can include improving customers' loyalty, reducing costs, increasing people's well-being, and organizing innovation processes more effectively. These examples illustrate that the benefits that are sought after by means of co-design can be very diverse.

What are the 4 principles of co production?

Principles of co-production. The principles of equality, diversity, accessibility and reciprocity (or getting something back for putting something in) are critical values for putting co-production into practice.

Discussion

How do we work better together to co-design/co-produce with our communities?

1. What do we need to consider?
2. What mechanisms do we have in place?
3. How do we hear resident voice/lived experience to help enable more people to walk?
